BATTLE WAGES IN EL CERRITO ELECTION

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Some of these days we are going to buy a shotgun for those boys "who have a "pull," and "know everyone in power," and "woe be to the poor city employee who arouses their ire."

Our peeve is directed especially at those who pluck flowers in our city parks and insist it is their right because they happen to be taxpayers or lived here for a certain number of years.

A few evenings ago we heard one of the gardeners telling his tale of woe to city officials.

It seems that hundreds of blossoms and plants have been ruined in Nicholl park, and also in Memorial park in the last few days. Other parks in the city have also suffered at the hands of these vandals.

We would suggest for one thing to correct this that the boys who have been tearing through the hedge at Memorial park take a few minutes more time and walk around on the sidewalks.

Well worn footpaths are also appearing across otherwise well kept lawns. Only a few yards from these paths of the crosscutters can be found well laid paths going in the same direction.

And some of the vandals flowers. Many of the blossoms pulled from plants in Nicholl park were found lying around the walks and other places after the picker had taken a sniff or two to see if he liked the odor.

One park worker informed us that a well known citizen became quite abusive when he was courteously requested not to pick the flowers. He informed the attendant that he was a taxpayer of the city of Richmond and that the flowers belonged to him so that he would pick as many as he pleased. He also informed the worker that if he didn't watch his step he would take the matter up with the authorities and "get his job."

Picture a mind as narrow as that in this day and age. Our suggestion would be that the same methods be used to remove these thieves as are used in other cases. The city cannot afford to keep watchmen on duty all of the time, but one or two good severe lessons without "reduced charges," might do some good.

Richmond has had an uphill fight to get good parks. We are paying a good price for them. Workers who plant and tend the flowers cost money. They are doing their work well—but they are bound to be disheartened if bed after bed of the beautiful blossoms are ruined.

We've got some pretty parks, let's try to keep them that way.

FOUR FACE GAS THEFT CHARGE

Four Crockett men will face Police Judge J. F. Plank in El Cerrito Wednesday to answer to charges of petty theft.

Several weeks ago the four men were returning from Oakland to Crockett and while on San Pablo avenue in El Cerrito their car stalled. They found that their gasoline had been exhausted.

Police allege that they pushed their car to a closed service station, broke a lock on a gasoline pump and stole a quantity of gasoline. They were arrested by Night Patrolman Ed Smith of El Cerrito.

The four are free on $100 bail each.

Chief Cox Hits Booklet Scheme

Chief of Police Dan Cox yesterday criticized the attempts of an outside advertising firm to use the name of the police department in soliciting advertisements from merchants for a "traffic" booklet.

In making his criticism Chief Cox declared that neither he nor anyone else in the department had given permission to use the name of the department for such a purpose. The chief said that the booklet is merely a private advertising scheme, and that the department had warned the man who is heading the project not to use the name of the Richmond police department in his soliciting.

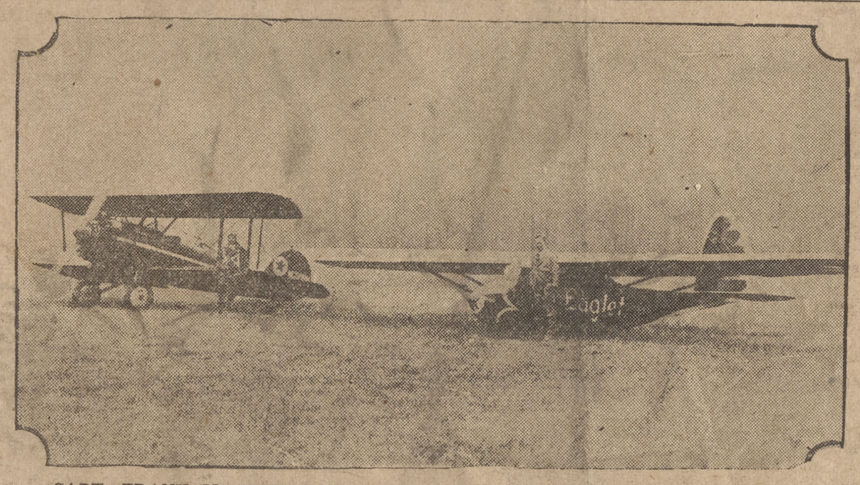
Nearing His Goal



CAPT. FRANK M. HAWKS, who is hitch-hiking across the continent in his glider Eaglet, landed at Tulsa, Okla., yesterday afternoon after a 375 mile trip from Sweetwater, Tex. The journey was made in five hours. Captain Hawks will take off this morning for East St. Louis, Ill. The glider is being towed by an airplane piloted by J. D. "Duke" Jarnigin who is shown standing beside his plane. Hawks is shown with the glider. The photo was snapped just before the take off at San Diego.

HAWKS IN OKLAHOMA

TULSA, Okla., April 2.—UP—After a day marked by bad flying weather, Capt. Frank M. Hawks, army pilot engaged in a transcontinental glider flight, landed his "Eaglet," glider here at 6'20 p.m. CST.

Hawks cut loose from the tow plane piloted by J. E. Jernigin, at a 3000 foot altitude, maneuvering his glider for 25 minutes before swooping down onto the field. He was greeted by one of the largest crowds that has met his air caravan since it left San Diego last Sunday.

Hawks landed at Oklahoma City shortly before noon after having experienced trouble at Wichita Falls, the first stop after leaving Sweetwater, Tex., at 6:51 a. m. A thunder storm delayed the takeoff.

At Oklahoma City, Hawks said, he experienced difficulty in landing due to the lack of wind.

"The worst part of the trip is over," Captain Hawks said. "I think the eastern part cannot compare in difficulty to the treacherous western air lanes."

He said the party would leave shortly after six o'clock tomorrow for Springfield Mo., enroute to St. Louis, their stopping point tomorrow night.

British Mum In Russian Tangle

LONDON, April 2.—UP— The Archbishop of Canterbury urged the government in vain today to appeal to the Soviet union to lease "religious persecution."

Lord Parmoor, replying for the government, said that undoubtedly there was "a vast amount" of persecution in Russia, but that British interference would be inadvisable on the prnciple that one country should not interfere in another's affairs.

Severance of diplomatic relations ,he said, would only intensify persecution, whereas now conditions seemed to be improving.

The archbishop had asked the government to suggest to Russia that diplomatic relations could continue "satisfactorily" only if Russia pad heed to Brtish public opinon regardng the Russian anti-religious campagn.

Six negro porters on the train were arrested.

ARMY FLIERS ON REVIEW

SACRAMENTO, April 2.—UP—their ability in rapid clearing of the Mather field tomorrow, opening a day of review and inspection in the Army's Air corps field exercises.

The first two days of the events were devoted to familarizing the pilots with the feld and surrounding country. With the topography of the region firmly in mnd, the men are now to be trained in "getting into acton."

In the afternoon the planes will pass in review before Commander General William E. Gillmore, following inspecton. Army men declare this to be one of the most impressive sights in the Air Corps.

All the planes are lined up in front of the hangars, n one solid line, facing the field. Following inspection the planes take off, and pass before the reviewing stand.

Robert Lohit, 17, Sacramento Boy Scout will be an honor guest with General Gillmore in the inspection and review. This distinction has been given Lohit for his proficiency in Scouting as demonstrated by first aid work last week when he saved the life of an Army man injured in an automobile accident in Sacramento. The man's arm was almost torn off and Lohit applied a tourniquet which stopped the flow of blood.

Tomorrow night General Gillmore will address a banquet given by the Sacramento chamber of commerce to newspaper correspondents, reporting the air exercises.

Events today were confined to flying throughout the territory for 100 miles surrounding Mather field, so that the pilots might acquaint themselves with the region.

COSGRAVE WINS IN DAIL

DUBLIN, April 2.—(U.P.)—William T. Cosgrave was re-elected by the Dail Eireann late tonight to serve as president of the Irish Free State executive council. He thus maintained his ascendancy over Eamonn De Valera, campaigner for an "Irish Republic."

Cosgrave, who had been defeated by a narrow margin last Thursday night on an old age pensions bill, was chosen for his old post by the Dail after De Valera and the Laborite leader, T. J. O'Connell, had been thrust aside in turn.

The successive votes were:

For De Valera—54 for; 93 opposed.

For O'Connell—13 for; 78 opposed.

For Cosgrave—80 for; 55 opposed.

De Valera, at present in Chicago, was nominated by Sean O'Kelly, acting leader of the Fianna Fail party. O'Connell immediately objected to the candidacy, while the crowded galleries hung on every word.

Desmond Fitzgerald, minister of cabinet, joined the assault, saying that De Valera had promoted a lawsuit in the United States based on a denial of the Dail's authority.

The Laborites and Independents voted solidly with Cosgrave's party, the Cumann Na Mgaedhal, to reject De Valera's nomination.

Deputy Speaker Daniel Morrisey then nominated O'Connel, but the De Valera party abstained from voting and the Cosgrave faction easily defeated him. Joseph Mongan nominated Cosgrave at this juncture.

BEAUTY SLAYER THREATS TOLD

EUREKA, April 2.—(U.P.)—Police sought today to apprehend the driver of a small coupe, who threatened William Martell, state's witness in the Mrs. Minnie McCoy murder case against Clarence King, with harm if Martell testified at the trial.

Martell, who was immediately furnished a bodyguard by the district attorney, said that the man drove into his service station and warned him to "lay off" talking too much about the McCoy case, and then drove rapidly away in a car which had no license plates.

Police armed with a description of the car, will seek the driver for questioning.

Martell is the man who stated that hesaw a man and woman quarreling in a small coupe at the side of the road near the spot where the body of Mrs. McCoy was found. His evidence is said to be damaging to the story of Clarence King, the confessed murderer, who is to plead self-defense.

Marc Morrison, of Eureka, was today appointed King's attorney.

Tots Arrive Too Late For Local Census

There are two Richmond citizens who will be overlooked by the census this year. In fact the United States government has refused to acknowledge the existence of these two, and informed them to wait until 1940.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Newlon, 623 Forty-third street are the parents of one of the children, a daughter, born yesterday afternoon at the Hospital Richmond. Some hours later a second arrived, a boy born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cook, 529 Dimm avenue.

Under a ruling of the census bureau children born after April 1, are not to be included in the census. By the same ruling, persons who die during the enumeration period will be counted in the census.

The result of the whole situation is that persons born yesterday or today aren't in existence and people who died today or tomorrow are still alive. Try and figure it out.

HOOVER ASKS CENSUS AID

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(U.P.)—The census-taker called at the White House today and President Hoover cheerfully surrendered all the information desired, at the same time speaking a word to the nation and asking cooperation in the tremendous task of enumerating its millions of inhabitants.

As head of the family at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, Hoover personally answered all the questions asked. He said he was an engineer, 54 years of age and that he could read and write.

The same scene, without the accompaniment of sound movies and speech making, was being enacted all over the country as the army of census-takers began their work. There were 120,000 enumerators spreading through every city and town, visiting the great mansions of the wealthy and the flats or cottages of the poor.

Towns Race

Two towns raced today for the honor of being first to complete their census, Centertown, Mo., in the geographical center of its state, laid claim to this distinction in a telegram to the census bureau signed by Census Taker Victor Witthaus, and almost simultaneously Supervisor Fred D. Killbourne, Kootenai county, Idaho, wired that District 28-22 there completed its census at 9:30 a. m.

In 1920 it was seven weeks before the first city of more than 100,000 reported but speedier tabulation methods have caused predictions that this year the count

FIVE SEEK POSTS ON BOARD

The battle for two positions on the El Cerrito city council at the mnuicipal election on April 14 gives promise of being one of the hottest political fights that El Cerrito has experienced.

The terms of Councilmen Phil A. Lee and Charles K. Zimmerman expire this year and both men are up for re-election.

Three other candidates have thrown their hats in the ring and have started their campaigns.

Three Candidates

Huber is an attorney and has been active in El Cerrito for many years.

'Fireworks Soon'

Since the first of the year there has been rumblings of the coming political fight among the various factions of the city, and as a result citizens are expecting "fireworks" from now until election night.

The opening guns in the campaign are expected to be fired tomorrow night at a mass meeting to be held at Central Hall, El Cerrito, under the auspices of the Loyal American Advance society, Lincoln Post.

Candidates will attend the meeting and are expected to lay down their platforms.

Anglim to Speak

Clifford C. Anglim, of Richmond, will be the speaker of the evening.

The meeting will be an old time political rally, with talks, band music and all the fixings. Indications were yesterday that the hall will be packed.

THE GIRL AND THE WOLF

The lean of pipe against his face,
The easy drift of smoke
While he at evening for a space
Resumes a random book—

Proclaim him man like any man,
Domesticated, kind,
It is his wife who turns to scan
Within to the face behind—

To the boyish brow she knew so well,
To the weak, wide boyish mouth,
Or fearfully to the sullen cell
Where the wolf is with the youth.

(There was a boy once tending sheep.
There were the lies he told
To the people in the town asleep,
And the wolf crept in the fold.

But she alone of the sleeping town
Believed his last wild call
And dropped her life like a soft dream down
And ran from her father's hall

To her lover on the fearful hill,
Where, though in wind and stars,
The hungry wolf is prowling still,
And the woman wears his scars.)

A RECIPE FOR CHARM

HELEN FERRIS, for years the editor of the American Girl and a writer of friendly and practical counsel for many American girls, says that the thing which most of them want most is popularity. They long to be liked, to be loved. They ask, so many of them, so many times, so pathetically, how they can win the affection of their world. Charm, even more than beauty, seems the supremely desirable attribute—charm in the widest sense, not exclusively "s. a.," for these girls want to be liked by their own sex as well as by the other.

Is there a recipe for charm? We fancy that we have been asked for it almost as frequently as Miss Ferris, and we often have wished we knew of a sure-fire formula. The most charming persons of our acquaintance seemed so different from one another—had they, we wondered, a least common denominator, a sine qua non of charm?

Even now, we are not sure that we have isolated it. But, in reading a delightful new book about some of the most charming women who ever ruled human hearts, we have been interested to discover that all of them did apparently have one quality in common. After all, if as the vocational experts say, one way of preparing yourself for success is to study the qualifications of others who have made good in the field, may there not be helpful suggestions for achieving popularity in such psychographs—soul-pictures—of supremely charming women as Gamaliel Bradford gives in "Daughters of Eve"?

WHAT many of these daughters did was, by conventional standards, deplorable. But what they were was not necessarily unworthy of imitation. And in one striking characteristic possessed by five of them—Ninon de Lenclos, Madame de Maintenon, Julie de Lespinasse, Catherine the Great, George Sand—there seems thus a useful object lesson for other women who would be charming.

Of Ninon de Lenclos he writes: "Ninon never lost a friend. . . . And the explanation is obvious, that underneath all the mirth and laughter there lay still deeper a wealth of tenderness and human understanding and sympathy, such as appears in another of her golden phrases: 'I believe that I go further than most people do in everything that touches the heart.' She touched hearts because she naturally loved them, because she turned to them with sympathetic curiosity and handled them with a gentle and affectionate touch and found in them no weakness and no folly that she could not parallel in her own."

Of Madame de Maintenon, who ruled Louis the XIV, and, through him, ruled France, we read that she used every resource "with exquisite skill, to win, to conquer, and to retain admiration and affection."

JULIE DE LESPINASSE, queen of one of the most brilliant and distinguished salons in the Paris of her time, owed no part of her popularity to beauty. "No one in passing her in the street," we are told, "would have picked her out as possessing any special attraction. Her face was pock-marked."

"Nevertheless," her biographer points out, "it is perfectly clear that she had an extraordinary charm that appealed to people of all sorts, to young and old, to rich and poor, to common and distinguished." Here is the secret of it, in the words of a contemporary. "You please people by the effect they have upon yourself, by the delight which they feel in appreciating how much you grasp what is worth while in them; you have the air of being obliged to them for being agreeable, and thus you double the pleasure they have in being so. . . . This art is, as you practice it, perfectly simple: it consists in never speaking of yourself to others, but a great deal of them."

Interest, you see, in others, rather than in herself. The same thing seems to have been true of Catherine the Great, Queen of Russia, who, says Mr. Bradford, "craved affection as much as she craved power." He goes on: "She peered into men's and women's souls, because she could use them and because she was genuinely interested in them. She was a great listener, a great questioner, and people told her all their secrets, because she understood and sympathized."

Finally, of George Sand, one of the first of the great women writers, the author of "Daughters of Eve," declares that "the abundance of these qualities of human love and sympathy is what makes George Sand eternally lovable and great. It is her undying belief in human nature and her unbounded love for it, even when she does not and cannot believe in it, that will always appeal in her. Love was the essential principle of her life."

If you would have others think of you, think of them—there seems to be one sure clue to the cultivation of charm.

Milan Berets

THE prominence of panamalac and baku in spring millinery straws makes the small hat of milan seem more unusual. Particularly in the beret is milan charming in its new softness that yields to draping. Black and navy are the smartest colors in these milan berets, and one model from Agnes wears a little white gardenia at the side, close to the neck.

The Beauty Shop

By Frances Olivier

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

SAID a dear mere man to us recently, "Isn't there some booklet or something telling women how to use make-up?"

"Some booklet!" panted the Beauty shop, having a vision of all the books, booklets, pamphlets, bulletins, articles, sermons and radio talks that have been written on the subject of make-up.

FRANCES OLIVIER

"Yes, instructions on using powder and rouge, you know. Why, the other day I saw an old lady using an eyebrow pencil, and she made a fright of herself with it, and it occurred to me that perhaps if there was some book"——

The trouble is not lack of books—as you and I know well—why, just look at the perfect make-up pamphlet we distribute free! No, the trouble is that so very few women will take the time to practice what the little books preach.

There are countless women, for example, who make a daily habit of hardening and aging their faces with too much rouge and making their mouths look big and vulgar with too much lipstick, and giving themselves a doubtful atmosphere with too much eye make-up.

Why? For lack of time, lack of self-study, lack of sticking to the rules. The good book on the subject tells them to make up under a clear, bright light and with the aid of a good mirror, and it reminds them over and over that too little is far, far to be preferred to too much when it comes to face decoration.

Apart from its tendency to dry the skin, and make it lined long before its time, overpowdering reveals every tiny crease present in the skin; it gives to the whole personality added age and an artificiality but rarely smart and almost never alluring.

We know a famous beauty specialist who makes it a point to send her clients away with the faintest hint of "shine" on their faces. More a lovely gleam it is, something suggesting the waxen finish of a gardenia petal. It is very beautiful and very, very youthful, and it is elegance personified.

The "secret" is in the use of a finishing cream or lotion, and then on top of it just a glow of rouge and then the powder, which is sparingly but evenly blended into the skin. The enchanting result could never be achieved by slapping or packing on powder and rubbing or daubing on rouge.

Make-up is an art, you know, an art requiring excellent materials and good taste and time and practice. And, by the way, pretty nearly all the rules are in our leaflet

Breaks Chain

Chain letters, most of which originate in England and America, have been a real nuisance in Norway this winter, according to reports from Oslo. Various complaints have aroused a discussion in which Mrs. Sigrid Undset has taken part. She says: "I should like to console the nervous victims by saying that I have broken at least twenty chains and experienced no misfortunes—it the award of the literary Nobel Prize is not regarded as a misfortune—because I remember well that on the morning of the day when the prize was awarded to me I put a chain letter in my waste paper basket after having torn it into a hundred pieces. I never feel more happy than after having destroyed a chain letter, but I admit that part of the happiness is derived from the fact that I know I should have sworn the most angry curses in old days before I overcame this bad habit. I feel a certain amount of sympathy with superstition if there is only a fraction of sound reason in it, but it annoys me that people should waste time and money on a thing so utterly idiotic as chain letters. Such letters may be dangerous for feeble minds, and it would be a good idea to make all who send out chain letters pay a heavy fine to maintain asylums for those whose brains have become deranged through receiving these letters."

The Common Foe

Palestine's most formidable enemy, the locust, again threatens to invade the country and both Jews and Arabs will have to forget their past feuds and join forces against the common foe. Elaborate preparations are being made by the Palestine Government, in co-operation with the neighboring countries, to check and destroy the enemy. All the resources of modern warfare, such as trenches, flame-throwers, gas and poison, will be utilized. In 1915 the country was laid waste by the gigantic hordes of locusts. Not a single blade of grass survived, and the damage done to the orange and wine groves was incalculable. It was three years before they regained their normal productivity. In 1928 formidable swarms of locusts invaded Southern Palestine, but a sudden storm drove them toward the Mediterranean Sea, where they were drowned. Last year they appeared in still greater force and for nearly three months a veritable battle was fought against them all along the Trans-Jordan-Nejd frontier. They were destroyed by means of a new flame-thrower invented by the Government entomologist before inflicting any material damage to local agriculture. This year heavy swarms, some of which are reported to be eight kilometres, deep, have already invaded several districts in Transjordania and Palestine. Their activities, so far, have been confined to egg-laying, and ploughing is being carried out all along the invaded areas to prevent hatching. In Transjordania alone over seventy tons of locusts have been collected, but the main armies of the enemy are still miles away from the battlefield getting ready for the spring offensive.

Mediaeval Drug Store

"Coltsfoot, nettle, skin of a snake, valerian, rosemary, roadweed and cockshead," muttered the mediaeval apothecary as he surveyed his stocks. And he had many other formidable-looking substances, which, allied with a good deal of faith, cured human ills. The alchemists' art, slightly removed from black magic, flourished in Hamburg in the Middle Ages, and a picture of the chemist's shop of the time is given by Prof. Ernst Finder in a recently published book, "The People of Hamburg in the Past." Impressive and mysterious objects lined the shelves of the apothecary's shop. Hanging from the ceiling were stuffed animals from foreign lands, crocodiles, swordfish, reptiles and birds. In the foreground was the alchemist's "prescription room," resembling a witch's kitchen. On tables stood glass tubing in intricate shapes and designs, cauldrons containing strange brews. Bitter medicines were concocted, and as a treat after swallowing, say a distil from the lungs of a black fox, were sweets. They made sugar almonds and candied peel, and so well liked were they that the Hamburg Council had fifty silver and gold bowls filled with sweets for consumption at their meetings. Remedial medicine was based on herbs in those days. But no shop was complete without blossoms, fruit, leaves, and the inner bark of elder trees, henbane, melissa, the eyes of crabs, earthworms, the fat from washed wool, human brains, and many other even more disagreeable substances. Two popular mixtures were "mithridate and theriaca" designed to protect mortals from accidental or intentional poisoning.

Colors Indorsed For Spring

BLACK and white easily takes the lead in metropolitan daytime fashions for spring. The black wool suit is a striking creation when allied with a white blouse and silver fox scarf. Long coat ensembles of wool and silk frequently are accented by large collars of white galyak but when this fur is used in black, white gleams from the lingerie not on the dress and a bit of white trims the hat. One variation of the black and white ensemble is the coat of black cloth keyed to a print dress in a black and white pattern, black motifs on a white ground.

Knitted suits for sports are a further indication that black and white is a truly fashionable combination, the blouses carrying out the white note and sometimes the hats in a novelty fabric in black and white.

Although green, as yet has not appeared to any consequence in spring costumes, it is conceded second place in the color spectrum, sponsored by the couture in all shades and frequently mixed with white for accent. The very fact that green is not now the color most often seen argues for its future as the season advances.

Blues are pronounced, particularly in the navy shade. The mixture of navy, linen, blue and white is unusual and smart, and striking when black is added. The darker blues attain distinction when accented by white for town costumes.

Brown continues to retain its interest, as it now is featured with white, with mustard or with beige.

Oh, Go to Bed

"HOW do we think, Dad?"

"I believe you don't think very much, son. You take it out in asking questions."

"Isn't asking questions thinking?"

"No, it's trying to get some one else to do your thinking for you."

"But, Dad, how do we think?"

"We think with our brains."

"Do our brains think?"

"Certainly."

"If brains do the thinking, how do we know it?"

"Oh, go to bed."

The Farmer's Advice

LIFE is a one-way street and you cannot go backwards,

Stay on your own sidewalk—mind your own business and KEEP GOING!

Look both ways when you cross the street and you will avoid being fodder for automobile fenders!

And remember—only so much of the sidewalk belongs to you.

Removing Scratches

THE polished surface of the radio and piano are so liable to be accidentally scratched, but the damage may readily be repaired.

If the blemish is just a slight scratch it can be effectually eradicated, and even the deeper scars can be well concealed.

Rub the whole surface with wood alcohol, using a light stroking motion. For a very deep scratch pour a liberal quantity of alcohol over it and rub this all over the surface with the alcohol-soaked cloth. After the alcohol is well rubbed in, pour on a little furniture polish and rub down with fine steel wool.

Any varnished wood that becomes scratched can be refinished in this way.

A DISH A DAY

What sauces to serve with the hot pudding, the cold dessert, shortcakes, fresh berries and fruits perplexes the column bride. Regarding whipped cream as a special treat to follow a simple dinner and not an everyday garnish, she thinks there must be some easily made sauces and dessert garnishes that are more appropriate and economical.

NANCY DORRIS

Soft custard sauce, crushed fruit or berry sauce, hard sauce with or without fruit, foamy butterscotch, chocolate, vanilla and caramel sauces are just a few of the rivals of whipped cream.

Since spring brings the fresh berries and early fruits into our markets the soft custard and crushed fruit sauces are most timely.

SOFT CUSTARD SAUCE

Three egg yolks
Two tablespoons sugar
Two cups sweet milk, scalded
One-half teaspoon vanilla
A pinch of salt
Cooking time: 6 to 8 minutes
Yield: Over two cups

The milk scalds in the double-boiler top while the egg yolks are blended with the sugar in a medium bowl. The egg whites stored in a covered glass container may be used later for cocoanut kisses, boiled icing or meringue pudding.

When the milk is scalding hot, pour a little slowly over the yolks and sugar. Mix well and add a little more and then a little more until the two mixtures have become one. Turn into the double-boiler top and cook gently, stirring the while, until the custard thickens a little and coats a metal spoon. The cooking time varies from six to eight minutes. The moment the custard coats the spoon, however, the mixture should be taken from the heat, although the time is barely six minutes.

Add the vanilla to the sauce and a pinch of salt. Set aside to cool. Chilled custard sauce in a pretty bowl accompanies the fresh ripe strawberries, or may be the sauce for old-fashioned (biscuit) shortcake.

Even more quickly made is the simple

CRUSHED FRUIT SAUCE

Three-fourths cup crushed berries or fruit
Three tablespoons marshmallow cream
One tablespoon hot water
Yield: About one cup

Soften the marshmallow cream in the hot water and mix well. Combine the softened cream with the crushed fruit or berries and serve cold or hot. Very nice with ice cream.

Slightly different is the richer

FRUIT HARD SAUCE

One-fourth cup butter
Three-fourths cup powdered sugar
One egg white, beaten stiff
One-half cup crushed berries or fruit.
Yield: One and one-half cups

Work the butter to creaminess and slowly add the powdered sugar. Beat well to attain a creamy consistency, and then fold in the stiffly beaten egg white. When light and foamy add the crushed fruit and berries. Very good with a hot pudding or dessert

N. Y.-BERMUDA FLIERS AT GOAL

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 2.—(U.P.)—After a night at sea in which they repaired the damaged pontoon gear of their plane "Pilot Radio" Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and two flying companions arrived here today, less than 24 hours after taking off from Long Island Sound.

The three men, Yancey, W. H. Alexander and Zeh Bouck, set their plane down in Hamilton harbor at 10 a. m. amid the blowing of whistles and sirens and the shouts of people who had gathered at dawn to welcome them.

Their actual flying time was only 8½ hours for the first New York-to-Bermuda flight, but they were forced to make the voyage in three laps, the last one on borrowed gasoline.

Overtaken by darkness last night 60 miles from their goal, they decided to descend on the ocean bosom rather than take a chance on landing on the reefs around this island. They damaged their pontoon gear, but managed to repair it, and settled down to spend the night.

At 6:15 a. m. today the plane took off for Bermuda. But the five unsuccessful preliminary attempts to take off from Long Island Sound yesterday morning not only had caused such a delay that darkness defeated their non-stop plan but had taken a heavy toll in gasoline. At 7 a. m. when within two miles of land, the Pilot Radio ran out of gas and landed in a choppy sea.

Captain Landman, the pilot warden, sighted them. A ship put out from St. George Island with gasoline to aid the fliers.

At 9:45 the plane took off from Murray's Anchorage. After circling over the island it dropped down onto Hamilton Harbor at exactly 10 a. m.

NET 'WIZ' MAKES SWAP WITH POWELL

Esau, they say, swapped his birthright for a mess of pottage. Since that time Caesar swapped his empire for a snake-bite, Sir Walter Raleigh swapped his cloak for a queen's smile, and the American people swapped liquor for varnish.

But there have been happier swaps. One of them is the world's swap of silent pictures for talking pictures, and that brings us to Johnny Risso, who recently swapped tennis knowledge for lessons in acting from William Powell.

Risso, playing a supporting role in Powell's first staring picture, "Street of Chance" made the agreement with the sleek and suave actor of Philo Vance fame several days after work on the picture had been started at Paramount's Hollywood studios.

Both considered the arrangement a fair swap. Risso is a phenomenon of the tennis court. Although handicapped by having to play with one arm because the other was paralyzed by a boyhood accident he earned his letter in tennis at the University of California three years in a row. At the Berkeley Tennis club he was a favorite mixed doubles partner of Helen Wills, the women's champion.

Powell, as every one knows is one of the most clever and best-known exponents of the art of cinema pretending that screendom has ever seen and heard.

In "Street of Chance" Powell is a big-time New York gambler. Risso is the idolizing newsboy who "takes a chance" and tries to save the life of the man who had befriended him. The picture will be seen and heard at the Fox-California theater today and tomorrow.

A talking comedy "Brown Gravy" is also on the program.

SUIT DIDN'T SO BRIDEGROOM BALKS

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(UP)—A little love spat over the matter of whether a cutaway coat is the proper attire for an afternoon wedding at the bottom of a swimming tank played havoc with the rehearsal of Wilshire boulevard's first under-the-water marriage today, for the bride was left waiting at the pool.

The affirmative in the argument was taken by Katie Wilson, 25, brunette, most recently a telephone girl and the prospective bride. Upholding the negative was the missing bridegroom, J. F. Gutrick, 26, handsome blonde, but slightly bald, tile-setter.

Everything breezed merrily along until Gutrick was told that his wedding attire would consist of a cutaway coat, grey trousers and pearl grey spats. He would wear a Tuxedo in the water, he said, or there would be no wedding.

Deadlocked

That was the way things stood tonight. However, hopes are still held that the couple will patch up the difference and, wearing diving helmets and the most correct of apparel, be married in some ten feet of water tomorrow afternoon.

Miss Wilson waited at the Ambassador plunge today for several hours while scouts searched for Gutrick.

"Try his favorite eating places," she instructed, figuring that all bridegrooms thing of future meals. But Gutrick was not in any of his accustonem restaurants.

Search On

"Try the poolrooms," the bride ordered. But Gutrick apparently had not confused a pool with a poolroom.

"We quarrelled last night, but I think he'll be over it by tomorrow," Miss Wilson said. "That is, if we find him, and I think we will."

However, the bride refused to become greatly worried. She donned a red bathing suit and took a dip in the pool where she plans taking the marital plunge tomorrow.

Over her head was placed a diving helmet, from which an air hose led to a nearby pump. Inside the helmet was a microphone connected to a loud speaking systtem.

When Gutrick, Miss Wilson and Rev. Sheldon Shepard, of the First Universalist church, enter the pool tomorrow, watchers can hear the ceremony being conducted under the water.

Bride Waits

The bride will wear a pink taffetta dress, silver slippers and a pink necklace. What the groom will wear is the problem. Incidentally, the helmet protects only the head and the clothes will be ruined.

It probably was just as well that Gutrick did not show up for the rehearsal. For on the bottom of the plunge Miss Wilson was posing for photographers.

Sitting in a chair in seven feet of water, she seemed waiting for someone, an angry gleam in her eye. She was holding a rolling pin.

SLAYER OF BEST FRIEND FOUND GUILTY

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—UP—After a 26-hour deadlock the jury which heard Major Owen R. Bird tell how he shot a "best friend" who interfered in a family argument, decided late today that the sportsman was guilty of manslaughter.

Major Bird shot and killed Percival G. Watson, an engineer, last November. The state had asked the death penalty on a charge of murder.

Major Bird took the verdict calmly and kissed his wife before he was taken to a cell to await sentencing Friday. The shooting occured during an argument when Major Bird returned home and found his wife talking to Watson. A triangle was denied.

Mrs. Laura Bird chided her husband for drinking and when Watson took her part, the major asked him to leave. Then, he said, Watson hit him. He testified that Watson appeared to have been drinking.

Major Bird often officiated at automobile races. He said he thought the revolver contained blank cartridges and was surprised when lead struck the floor. In a scuffle, he testified, Watson was shot. The engineer died the following day.

Warning Issued As To Loading Of Camp Luggage

SACRAMENTO, April 2 — With California's annual outdoor motoring and camping season approaching, the Division of Motor Vehicles today called attention to provisions of law governing the loading of camp equipment.

For the sake of safety, it was said, the law requires that no trunk carrier or other luggage extend beyond the line of the hub caps, on the left side of the car nor more than six inches beyond the hub cap line on the right side of the car.

A new section of the law prohibits the carrying of spare tires in front of the radiator.

Luggage or camp equipment must not be so loaded that it covers either the front or rear plates. No load may be carried exceeding a height of 13 1-2 feet above the surface of the road.

Campers who contemplate the addition of trailer or semi-trailers to their outfuits were urged to remember that the new law prohibits the operation of a trailer that whips or swerves from side to side in a dangerous manner and fails to "follow substantially in the path of the towing vehicle." License plates are required for all trailers.

Those who go to the mountains were advised to remember that audible warning with the horn must be given when approaching curves where the view is obstructed for 200 feet and that coasting is illegal.

All persons contemplating long motoring trips were urged to have their lights and brakes adjusted.

CROCKETT, April 2—Oscar Pyttz, local plumber has announced he will be a candidate for justice of peace in the Crockett election. Ray Standish, incumbent, although he has not signified his intentions of running, is understood to be a candidate for re-election.

Shade Trees On Delaware Highways

Delaware for a number of years has been planting shade trees along the highways where the right-of-ways were wide enough, reports the California State Automobile association. An effort has been made to keep the roadsides free from litter and to have them mown frequently in the summer season.

Lean Mixture Will Cause Overheating

If you operate your car on a lean mixture it will tend to overheat on long grades or when the car is heavily laden, points out the California State Automobile association. On the other hand, a rich mixture will cause overheating when the car is "running light."

JAPAN ACCEPTS U. S. NAVAL PROPOSALS

LONDON, April 2.—UP—Japan officially accepted the American naval proposals today, and the session of the five-power conference, scheduled for Friday, was postponed until next week to give further time for an Ang.o-French security agreement.

These developments were hailed with delight by the American delegates.

"The situation is much improved over last week," Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson told the press after the delegation heads had deferred the plenary session. "I am much more optimistic for a five-power agreement than I was at that time."

Considerable formality was observed when Japan's official acceptance of the American figures was announced to Stimson, Senator David A. Reed and Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald by Japanese Ambassador Tsuneo Matisudaria. The four men met in the first committee room of St. Jame's palace.

2 Reservations

Japan's two reservations to the agreement will be taken up in detail tomorrow, but it was reliably learned the Americans and British have already decided to accept them.

While MacDonald was at St. Jame's, Chancellor of Exchequer Philip Snowden represented him in the House of Commons and successfully parried questions as to the exact nature of the formula by which Britain is seeking to satisfy French security demands.

Asked whether any changes were contemplated in the League of Nations covenant, with respect to joint action against an aggressor, Snowden said:

"No. I gather this question refers only to conversations which may proceed at London at the present time. Of course, that does not prejudice discussions which may be held by the League of Nations regarding amendment of the covenant."

Sub Discussion

The delegation heads met at St. Jame's immediately after the Anglo-American-Japanese session. Sir Maurice Hankey, secretary general of the conference, submitted a statement saying a sub-committee's report was ready on the question of size of submarines and that the question of humanizing submarine warefare was still in the hands of a jurist subcommittee.

An official communique said:

"It was agreed that the Friday plenary session should be postponed owing to the circumstance that the progress of certain negotiations which it is undesrable to interrupt at this stage might be affected by a phblic statement concerning them."

Later the British spokesman explained that the postponement was due to the Anglo-French negotiations.

Builders To Support Barbers Resolution

SACRAMENTO, April 2.—Unanimous support was offered to California barbers in a resolution adopted by the State Building council, in convention at Sacramento recently.

Commending the barbers in their effort to close California shops on Sunday, the resolution indicated that the solid support of the building trades would be given when the proposed law is placed before the voters in November.

Plans to circulate the initiative petitions are virtually completed and will be placed in the various shops within 30 days, according to the barber's legislative committee.

Barbers Plan Closed Shops On Sundays

SACRAMENTO, April 2.—Northern California is solidly behind the proposed measure to give California barbers their Sunday off for rest or recreation.

Newspapers in every city visited by Vernon L. Rose, chairman of the barbers' legislative committee, have indicated their willingness to support the initiative measure editorially, he reported upon his return to Sacramento this week.

"Mass meetings were called in Santa Rosa and other points I included in my itinerary," Rose said. "Keen interest is already being shown by all barbers to place California with 46 other states which now have a Sunday closing law. And with the support my trip brought out in northern California, I haven't a doubt but that the proposed measure will become a law in November."

Additional workers have been scheduled to cover all California points before the petitions are circulated among the voters, Rose indicated.

The Body Beautiful

By DR. G. A. ESTERBERG

The beauty of the human form has inspired the genius of the world in all ages and the racial ideals of physical beauty, like all ideals have tended to precipitate into action.

The Hottentots and the Arabs demand that their reigning belles shall be fat. The Greek ideal seems to have expressed itself in action rather than repose. They admired the figure that could do things and so we find the "Archer," "the Dancer," the Discus thrower," "the Warrier" the freize of "the Horseman" among their most beautiful sculptures. In fact there are none more beautiful among the sculptures of the world.

The American ideal of 100 years ago was one of the most fantastic ideals of feminity imaginable—stooping shoulders, wasp - like waist with a silhouette below the waist like an immense bell. What this did to the health of women it was immodest to think about, much less to discuss, but the price in the coin of ill health was all too often cheerfully paid. The ideal of the time demanded it and women did their superbest to fulfill the ideal while it flourished

Slimness Popular

Our present day American ideal of physical beauty in women can be expressed in three words—willowy, tall, slim. And the greatest of these, for most people, is slimness. In some of its aspects it is little worth while for me to dwell upon the ideal of slimness. From a dietary standpoint who needs to be reminded that foods rich in sugar and starch are fattening—to some people. In these days of famous Hollywood reducing diets they are on every woman's tongue.

Neither need you be reminded that "proper exercise persistently practised helps materially in promoting a sylph-like figure." Most folks who shun dietary evils, who exercise either with or without music, who vibrate the hips in the vibrating machines. Most of these folks reap as their reward a gratifying message as they read their "Healthometers." But alas, there are others who are equally persistent in following the straight and narrow path of diet and exercise—the paths that usually leads to slimdom and these are justified in scowling at the impudent message of their scales. As they push that inanimate bit of metal back in its place it seems to help these disgruntled ones to growl "how do you get that way."

Must Be Tall

Some time someone started the idea that to be beautiful one must be tall and slender, so some women do their best—just as women in all ages have done their best—to come up to this current standard of beauty. They wear high-heeled shoes and heel-pads. Hats and gowns are chosen with the idea of lending height. Stretching exercises are taken. Everything possible is done to attain the desired tallness. But the shortys are still a bit short of the mark and who can blame them if, in their heart of hearts they grumble as they look upon their taller sisters —"How do you get that way?"

This is just the point. Why does Mrs. Brown remain slim when her diet includes such generous portions of potatoes, candy and cream? Mrs. Jones consistently denies herself these luxuries yet the message of her scales becomes increasingly offensive to her. Why do the fat folk crave sweets that makes them fatter? Why do the thin folks crave vinegar and pickles that tend to make them thinner? Why the wide physical and mental variations within the same family? Some tall and slim, others short and chubby. Some morose and irritable—others keen and alert. Some dishonest and untruthful—some the soul of honor.

Doesn't "Just Happen"

These and a host of similar questions might be asked but we demand a more satisfactory answer than Topsy's "they just growed that way." Today we know that nothing "just happens." We know that everything is amenable to the law of cause and effect whose unfailing operation is universal in its application. Much of the cause of these variations and seeming anomolies is found to be the imperfect functioning of internal secretion.

Dr. Parker of John Hopkins university says: "More and more we are forced to realize that the general form and external appearance of the human body depends to a large extent, upon the functioning, during the early developmental period of the endocrine glands. Our stature, the kind of faces we have, the length of our arms and legs, the shape of the pelvis, the color and consistency of the integument (the skin), the quality and regional location of our subcutaneous fat, the amount and distribution of hair on our bodies, the tonicity of our muscles, the sound of the voice, and the size of the larynx, the emotions to which our exterior gives expression, all are to a certain extent conditioned by the production of our glands of internal secretions."

Nature Holds Balance

So we find that Mother Nature has the balance of power in determening how we "get that way!" However, there is much pressure that can be brought to bear upon Mother Nature to the end that she may mould us nearer to our hearts desire.

The development of a roll of fat around the waistline—one which resists the blandishments of exercise and diet should attract attention to the pituitary gland, a small and very vital gland of internal secretion located in the head and concerned in the matter of development. It is impossible to overcome this roll of fat without giving attention to the infections or other disease processes that may produce dysfunction of this gland.

Goitre is the best known result of dysfunction of the thyroid gland. Sinus infections, diseased tonsils and other sources of infections may cause altered function of this gland with consequent general puginess and coarsening of the features and increase of body fat.

The sex glands and the adrenals which cap the kidneys also influence growth and maintenance of the body. They, too, must reflect health in a healthy body if we would realize the ideal of grace, charm, and willowness, which the ideal of the age demands. After all, the body should reflect as much grace of movement as the wings of the bird because it is essentially an instrument of motion.

For the comfort of those who are "pleasingly plump" consider the statement of Ziegfeld. "Give me the girls with curves! We are Oh so tired of lines, to say nothing of angles." While few aspire to be candidates for fame in the Follies, it will repay all to give heed to Ziegfeld's ideal which demands above all things that the body reflect perfect health, the only kind of body which can be described as "The Body Beautiful."

Proposed Barber Law To Be Voted On In November

Voters of Richmond will be asked to assist California's barbers at the November election this year to secure one day each week for rest or recreation. This seems little enough to ask, since many other professions and trades are figuring on a five or even four day week.

Barbers, however, have never been able to lay off on Sunday—due to competition with certain elements. Although local agreements have been made in some cities, these have never proved successful because they have been brokn so easily. And it has been pointed out that only by state law will they be given their Sunday off to be with their families.

The last barber legislation the State of California passed has proved itself admirable. Under the license law not only have innumerable dirty shops been made to clean up, but the standards of both shops and barber schools have been elevated to those of the best in the United States. The people will now be asked to give their support to a measure which, if passed, will place California's shops on the same basis as those of 46 other states now having a Sunday Closing Law.

Every voter should lend his support toward this proposed law. We do not work on Sunday ourselves, and we should give our assistance to those who are compelled to work—whether they want to or or not. So next time your barber starts to shave you and begins to give you the "low down" on the proposed measure, just let him know you're willing to vote for such a law.

And you'll be surprised how much better the shave will be.

Why not plan an all-electric kitchen?

The electric range cooks automatically

A beautiful electric range harmonizes with any decorative idea you have for your kitchen. The cleanliness of the electric range keeps your kitchen immaculate.

And how the electric range improves cooking! Delicious food cooks automatically without you "watching" in the kitchen.

The new electric range is speedy. Improved cooking elements make electric cooking as fast as gas cooking.

Why not come in and see the beautiful, new porcelain enameled electric ranges at our office?

All the hot water you want—at the turn of the faucet

What could be finer than an all-electric kitchen?—with its modern electric range and an automatic electric water heater.

The electric water heater keeps an abundant supply of hot water ready for instant use, day and night.

An electric water heater, when used with an electric range, heats water for one-third to one-half of a cent per gallon! So little to pay for this modern comfort. And a clean kitchen!

Why not also see the electric water heaters at our office? There are many models to choose from.

NEW RULES FOR OLYMPIC WILL HARM U.S.

NEW YORK, April 2.—(UP)—The United States will be handicapped at the Olympic games at Los Angeles in 1932 if proposals by France for changes in the rules governing these quadrennial athletic contests are adopted by the Olympic Congress which meets in Berlin next month.

The latest suggestion made by the French Olympic committee is to limit each nation to one entry in each track and field event.

While it is quite possible that the French suggestion arises from a desire to limit the expense of Olympic competition there is a sporting touch to the proposal in that it undoubtedly would favor the smaller nations.

Under the present rules, each nation is allowed four entries in each event. The athletic supremacy of the United States, maintained through successive Olympiads, has been established on that basis. No official point score is kept at the Olympic games, but the lion's share of the first, second and third prizes awarded for individual performances invariably come to this country.

With but one representative of a nation permitted in each event, the odds on an American sweep of Olympic honors would be decidedly lessened.

Chicago Cubs Beat Angels

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(UP)—Heavy run-getting in the seventh and eighth innings allowed the Chicago Cubs to trim Los Angeles, 10 to 7, in an exhibition game here today. Blake, pitching for the Cubs, allowed nine hits, but kept them scattered. Chicago, on the other hand, got four runs in the seventh and three in the eighth. Hartnett and Stepenson connected for home runs.

The league schedule will start early in May. Seven inning contests will be played, starting at five o'clock.

Fish And Game Commision Asks Quail Sanctuaries

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.— In an effort to restock the game fields of the state of California with native California quail, Walter S. Welch, captain of the volunteer deputies of the Division of Fish and Game, has appealed to the 550 volunteer workers in that department to aid in the establishment of inviolate sanctuaries throughout the range of these birds.

All volunteer deputies have been asked to call upon the farmers in their communities and to urge them to voluntarily set aside, as a quail sanctuary, at least one ravine, gulch or canyon on their lands in which quail now exist, and where water, feed and cover for the birds can be found. No shooting is to be done on these sanctuaries for a period of at least three years.

"It is believed," said Welch, "that if a sufficient number of quail sanctuaries as outlined can be established this year, and that if the birds are afforded water, feed, cover and protection, every acre of suitable quail habitat within the state can be satisfactorily restocked with quail within three years, without the necessity of changingg the present law, or the expense of establishing state quail refuges and farms or importing quail."

According to Welch, farmers and landowners should be advised that by establishing quail sanctuaries on their lands they can maintain a supply of quail, enjoy quail shooting on the lands surrounding their sanctuaries and that the birds will be an asset to their property.

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—UP—Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat contender for world middleweight honors, paid $20 in municipal court here today on a charge of being intoxicated.

Ace pleaded guilty because, he said: "Them cops would a said I was soused anyhow."

It seems that Sergeant Lockhart and Officer Hoffman came upon Hudkins last midnight, arguing with a woman on a street corner. They escorted the Wildcat to a cage in Georgia Street police station. His brother, Clyde Hudkins, got him out on $20 bond. Ace did not appear in Sunrise court until he learned that the law sought him with a warrant.

Cards, Troy Seek Site For Big Track Meet

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Apr. 2.—UP—Stanford and the University of Southern California today settled the dispute over the locale of the forthcoming dual track meet between the two universities, although the place for the meet has not been decided.

Graduate Manager Al Masters of Stanford, notified Manager Glynn Wilson of U. S. C. that any field satisfactory to the southern college would be satisfactory to Stanford, providing that U. S. C. would accept responsibility for the condition of the field and the safe accommodation of spectators.

The dispute arose when it was discovered that the Los Angeles coliseum was not available for the day of the meet—April 12—and when Stanford objected to using the Occidental college track, first suggested by U. S. C.

Definite announcement of what track will be used, is expected to be made shortly by U. S. C. officials.

Dancing Barge Officials Hit In Crash Probe

PORTLAND, Ore., April 2.—(UP)—Capt. Isaac Turpa, pilot aboard the lumber schooner Davenport when it rammed the dance barge Swan, today blamed the management of the pleasure boat for the crash early Sunday near St. Helens, Ore., that resulted in a loss of eight lives.

Testifying before United States Steamboat Inspectors Edthofer and Wynn, the pilot said the accident would not have happened if the Swan had been properly lighted and had been following the rules of the Columbia river.

Captain Turpa said he saw only one white light on the barge and that he could see no running lights on the tug Dix, that propelled the Swan. He described efforts to avoid striking the Swan and of tossing life rings and buoys to passengers as they floundered in the Columbia's ice waters.

Several passengers who were on the Swan will present their testimony Thursday before the steamboat inspectors.

High Trackmen To Compete In Oakland Meet

The varsity track athletes of Richmond union high school will compete with the track men of East Oakland and University High schools today at Bushrod park in Oakland.

The prospects of the Richmond high varsity in the Alameda County Athletic league are rather poor, according to Phil Hempler, track coach at the local high school. The Richmond runners have not seemed able to find their right stride, while the local entrants in the throwing and jumping events have been unable to measure up to the standard expected of them.

However, the Richmond varsity boys have been training strenuously for several weeks, and are now in fairly good condition.

It is expected that the Richmond high school varsity will withdraw from competition in Saturday's Mission track carnival in San Francisco because of lack of transportation.

B Track Team Of High Takes Hard Drubbing

The Richmond union high school B track squad was unable to take a single place in the first Alameda County Athletic league B meet of the season yesterday on the Piedmont oval.

The meet was won by Piedmont high school, Alameda high school placed second, Berkeley third, Hayward fourth, San Leandro fifth, Centerville sixth, and Richmond seventh.

Richmond's B team was handicapped yesterday by its late arrival at Piedmont, which caused it to miss several events. In the other events, the inexperience of the local boys was displayed. It was shown yesterday that the greatest need of the B squad is practice.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SYNOPSIS

Robbed on a drunken spree after reaching a white settlement in New Guinea, David Wade is befriended by Stella Blackney, daughter of the dipsomaniac hotel-proprietress. She tells him he was robbed by O'Shane, the store-keeper who sold him liquor. She is wife in name only to O'Shane, who has agreed not to claim her while her mother lives. Stella fears and loathes O'Shane and begs Wade to take her away to some South Sea island. She will get his money back and they will trade with the natives. Her mother is taken desperately ill and dies in delirium tremens.

To the second crew-boy, Dolobe, she also made a gift. So impressed were they by these acts that they unquestioningly obeyed her injunctions to secrecy. In order that the whole thing might not appear stranger than was necessary, she told them that she and Wade were man and wife.

They had tentatively selected for their place of refuge an island called Motogaru, which, nine days' sail from Samora, lay a little to the north of the Solomon group; and their chief reason for selecting it was an account of it given by Manua and Dolobe.

Each had visited the island, and each was positive of its productivity—of the number and size of its coconuts, the quality of the produce of the natives' gardens, the prodigality of its mango-trees and banana palms. No white or other foreigner lived there.

To the man and the girl it seemed just the kind of place they required. Its distance from Samoa and its uncharted approach would make discovery by O'Shane exceedingly difficult.

So, laying a southerly course, they headed down through the isles—and reef-strewn seas, seeing nothing of ships or inhabited land, with each day the trade-wind giving to the sails a swelling like the breast of a bird, and each night leaving them to the vagaries of a night-wind—a gentle, idling whisper of a wind which seemed to come from nowhere and to nowhere was bound.

And all the while Stella was glad of heart with a gladness she had never known before. The night of departure she for long stayed on deck watching the black smudge which was Samora fade from the face of the darkling sea. That black smudge had held for her many miseries, and she wanted to see the last of it.

She had escaped her chain! Escaped it! she inwardly repeated, the thought singing.

"The dull, thick links—the curve of them goes the other way now!" she cried to Wade. "I see the chain from the outside! From the outside! And it is vanishing! It is gone!" And tears came.

She thought then she had reached her profoundest depths of feeling. Nothing, she thought, could stir her more than the knowledge she had at last escaped her unenviable environment. She had achieved the greatest desire of her life.

But the emotion aroused by escaping soon gave place to an emotion acuter and deeper still.

In her need to win clear of O'Shane she had regarded the offering of herself to Wade in return for assistance and protection as something in the nature of a piece of business, of not very high moral tone perhaps, but the only device open to her. Better, she had thought, the embrace of this clean-living young man than the embrace of the detested storekeeper. It would be less immoral to give herself to Wade than to give herself to O'Shane. Of two immoralities she chose the lesser.

But when her chosen deliverer had hesitated, she went further. She was in no mood to allow any moral squeamishness to wreck her plans. Any means justified her end. Deliberately, with all the art and artifice that was hers, she used her femininity to persuade him . . . to tempt him. She was versed in the ways of men and the feelings of men. She knew . . . she tempted him . . . purposefully . . . strategically . . . knowing well her power. . . .

Not for a moment did she consider what might be the ultimate effect upon herself. She did not even think there might be any ultimate effect at all. It was enough if she escaped Samora and O'Shane.

But there was an ultimate effect, and it was the most tremendous thing that had ever happened to her.

For with the morning following their flight came to her the knowledge that she loved this protector of hers, that for the remainder of her life, for all time, he would be to her all that man could be to woman. She loved him! Loved him! The phrase surged through her like some grand paean pulsed to golden music.

She loved him! He who protected her had also awakened her. Through the occasion of sex had come the occasion of love. Thinking to give only her body, she found she had given her soul as well. She had never thought her surrender would be so complete.

The sensation overwhelmed her. Her outlook on existence changed. Even the material things about her were different. She saw everything in terms of love. From a mere contrivance of wood and canvas in which she was escaping her chain, the cutter became a love-thing. Without it, this big new feeling would have not come to her.

It mattered little that at present, David was held to her only by the power of sex-attraction and chivalry. She was satisfied to have him as an object of affection. This first great outpouring of love was content with the outpouring, rather than with seeking return. She believed that in time he would come to love her as she loved him. With the propinquity of their island life it would scarcely be otherwise. Meanwhile she was content to love him as never she had thought it possible to love any man.

Her present was roseate as her past had been grey. The crew-boys admired and respected her and Lo-oru adored her. But for Stella, her marriage with Manua might still have been a long way off; by providing the marriage-price, Stella had shortened by a year the term of Manua's labouring for her. To Stella this was a small thing, and to Lo-oru a tremendous thing. She would do anything for Stella. She made her mistress's welfare her own.

Cheerfully would she have given her life for Stella. When, during a period of hot calm, Wade and Stella donned bathing suits and prepared to go overside for a swim, she tried hard to dissuade them. Though there were no signs of sharks, there was always danger from sharks, she said. And when, disregarding her, they entered the water, she for a while watched anxiously from the rail and then cast off her fibre petticoat and, naked, joined them—to swim protectingly on Stella's seaward side, so that should a shark attack she herself would be the likeliest victim.

"It makes me afraid—a love like that," Wade commented later; and Stella was no less awed.

But sometimes Stella saw on that brown face a worried look; and one day she questioned her whether anything were wrong.

Lo-oru made no immediate answer, but looked quickly away, afraid or ashamed, and it was only when the question was repeated that she replied:

"I hope that you, my sinabada, will always be happy."

"That is very nice of you, Lo-oru. But—why do you say it in such a tone?"

"Because—because——" Lo-oru halted.

"You think I shall not always be happy?"

"I hope you will be. Yes, truly I hope so," Lo-oru answered promptly, and again looked away. Stella regarded her in silence a moment; then she said:

"Come on, Lo-oru; out with it. What is it that is worrying you?"

"You will not be angry with me?"

"Of course not!"

"I hope it is not true. But, sinabada, a man have talked and my ears have listened. It was not Manua, my husband. It was Dolobe. Manua said it was wrong to speak such things. Very wrong. But it made my heart come sore to hear them, sinabada. Sore like anything, for I thought that maybe the things were true things, though bad things. Last night I slept only a little bit. I thought about my sinabada all the time."

She stopped, and her big brown eyes were full upon Stella's face, lovingly.

"I not want my sinabada to get all burned up."

"Burned up," Stella repeated.

Lo-oru lowered her voice still further, as though she scarcely dared speak the words at all.

Captain Dollar Fights Orders Of Physician

SAN RAFAEL, April 2.—UP—Confined to his home here for several days by acute bronchitis, Capt. Robert Dollar, 86, founder of an around-the-world steamship company, was becoming restless tonight.

Although he long ago passed the age at which most men of wealth retire and his present illness requires regular calls from Dr. Rafael G. Dufficy, the family physician, Capt. Dollar refuses to stay away from his office willingly.

"He won't go to bed, and spends his time sitting in the sun room" Dr. Dufficy said. "He arose early today and had his usual breakfast."

Captain Dollar's temperature had returned to normal when Dr. Dufficy, visited him at six p. m. tonight.

"He had a much better day, and there is a 100 percent improvement in his condition tonight," the physica nsaid. He declined to state however, that Captain Dollar was entirely out of danger.

Muscle Shoals Again Brought Before Senate

WASHINGTON, April 2.—UP—As the Senate took up the 10-year old Muscle Shoals question in the Norris government operation bill today, the Senate lobby committee learned that the appointment of Republican Committee Chairman Huston indicated to his lobbying associates that President Hoover would veto the measure.

Huston, head of the Tennessee river improvement association, which worked for the private bid of the Cyanamid company for the great power plant, was appointed head of the party one day, and on the next W. Worthington of the association sent out a memorandum to his associates predicting a veto. President Coolidge two years earlier pocket vetoed the same bill.

These and other revelations were cited to the Senate by Senator Norris, Repn., Neb., as having taken from the private companies and right they might have had to obtain the great Tennessee river plant in Alabama.

Norris attacked Chester Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, for disseminating propaganda favoring the Cyanamid company bid for Muscle Shoals.

The Senate is expected to pass Norris' bill after a few days debate. The lobby committee today obtained from President W. B. Bell of the Cyanamid company an admission his company spent $168,706 in its lobbying effort to obtain the power plant.

The House military affairs committee meanwhile considered a bill by Rep. Hogg, Repn., Ind., to authorize incorporation of the "Farmers Federated Fertilizer corporation," by A. P. Sandles, Ottawa, Ia., and A. L. Sponsler, Hutchinson, Kan., to take over the $150,000,000 government plant.

CENSUS TAKER CALLS ON HOOVER

will move more swiftly, despite the increase in population and number of questions asked.

Census Taken

J. Sterling Moran, census supervisor for the District of Columbia, called at the White House after Hoover had stepped over for luncheon from the temporary executive offices in the state, war and navy building.

The scene was laid on the steps of the south portico, and was not rehearsed. The president handed his folded schedule to Moran and said:

"I have already prepared this paper for you. It is well that the American people know that the census is confidential but there is no special reason for secrecy here.

Hoover Signs

"It is well to have a confidential census taken by the government to enumerate the people. I hope you will have everywhere the assistance you deserve. The census is vital to progress and the determination of many social policies. In fact it is the great stock-taking of American progress."

The form made out by Hoover was exactly the same as that used throughout the country, except that the president was not asked to fill in the employment schedule.

ANDREW CARNEGIE

ASKED to explain his phenomenal success, Andrew Carnegie blandly attributed it to his ability to get men to work for him who knew more than he did.

And that's a formula for success. Nobody who is really successful does all the work himself. He employs other people's minds and efforts.

Do you do the same in the intricate business of running your home and taking care of your family? You can, quite easily.

You can employ specialists in diet; you can serve the master dishes of famous chefs; you can have the advice of style authorities in selecting your clothes, of whole electrical laboratories in buying household appliances, by reading the advertisements.

All the newest knowledge—knowledge millions of dollars and years of effort have won—is contained in the advertisements.

If you will use the advertisements in this newspaper as Andrew Carnegie used men who knew more than he did, every dollar you spend will be spent wisely, economically, and will return full measure of satisfaction. That's the way to be a success in the greatest business in the world—making a home.

It pays to read the advertisements
